"The question, What measures are most suitable? Is a matter or discursion. At the first glance it seems doubtful to the German government if a larger or smaller increase of the police force would give the desired result, but she is far from rejecting this idea ab initio as unfeasible. Germany regards with some skepticism, however, the idea of placing the command of the Turkish troops in the hands of Christian officers, even if this is done by allowing European officers to direct the movements of the troops without their being actually in command of such troops when actually opertaing.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Baron Speck von Sternburg, the German Ambassa dor to the United States, has an article in the forthcoming Outlook, giying an official German view of the Mace donian visituation. The ambassador speaks with full personal as well as official information, as he was Germany's agent at Belgrade for some time, and made a study there and in Alacedonia of existing aconditions. He says:

"Owing to the fact that the American press took much interest in a statement I recently made regarding Germany's policy in Macedonia, and further, that I have received various letters from interested parties asking remedy, and that steps must be taken remedy, and that steps must be taken
